1. What information do we collect?

a) Personal information...

Such as company name, contact name, address, country, telephone number and e-mail address. We collect this information when you register for the Water Risk Filter website. You may choose to not disclose this info.

b) Facility information...

To find out about the basin and industry related risks of your company, you need to specify the location of your facility and select the appropriate industry.

To define what your company can do to respond to water issues and mitigate some of the risks, it is required to fill in a questionnaire in detail. You need to provide information on the physical, reputational and regulatory situation of your company.

c) Non-personal information...

WWF collects data such as IP address (the location of the computer on the internet), pages accessed and files downloaded. This helps us to determine how many individuals use our site, how many people visit on a regular basis, which pages are most popular, and which pages are least popular. This information doesn't tell us anything about who you are, it simply allows us to monitor and improve our service.

2. Where will the information be held?

We promise that WWF will not share the information you give to us on this website with any other organization outside of DEG and WWF. In fact DEG will only be able to see data related to their own inputs and clients.

WWF will be able to monitor the use of the tool and the results of assessments, but not able to use this or any company input data unless specifically agreed by your company.

3. Security

WWF uses technical and organizational security measures to protect the data we hold about you against accidental or deliberate manipulation, loss, deletion or unauthorized access. Our security measures are on a high level and are being improved continuously as new technology develops. The processing and transmission of data is encrypted by the SSL (Secure Sockets Layer) protocol. Nevertheless, no security system can provide guaranteed protection. Using the internet implies the acceptance of security breaches and the associated risks.
